THREE BROTHERS ARE LOST FRIDAY

STEUBENVILLE, O., April 18.—Strong undercurrent in a 15-foot pool in which they were thrown when their rowboat was swept over a dike, today had caused the drowning of three brothers in Black Channel at Castonia, near here.

JOHN BECK DIES TODAY

Retired Butcher, Resident Here Many Years, Is Claimed Suddenly Saturday.

Pneumonia, after an illness of only a few hours caused the death at 2:35 a. m. Saturday of John Beck, 83, retired merchant of this city, at his home, 111 E. Water-st.

Mr. Beck who had been suffering from a heavy cold to which he had given no attention, had attended a meeting of the Odd Fellows lodge earlier in the evening and had been taken to his home about 9:30 by Fred McGath. At that time Mr. Beck complained of illness attributing it to an operation which he had undergone about one year ago.

He became dangerously ill during the night and Dr. D. V. Courtright was called who pronounced him suffering from pneumonia.

He was a native of Wurtenberg, Germany, and came to this city at the age of 19 years with his parents, John and Elizabeth Krimmel Beck.

For over 50 years Mr. Beck and his brother Lewis Beck conducted a meat market under the name of Beck Brothers both retiring from active work about three years ago.

Chillicothe Publication Discusses Parking Law

What Chillicothe thinks of Circleville's proposed timeparking law, now resting with council in the form of a resolution from the Chamber of Commerce directors, as shown in the News-Advertiser of that city Friday.

"And now Circleville wants to try a two-hour parking limitation ordinance

"The matter was brought to the attention of the Circleville city council Wednesday night in a resolution presented by the Chamber of Commerce there

"The resolution states that the object of the proposal is to permit farmers and other visitors to enter the city and find a parking place when they wish to transact business. This, according to the resolution, would enable farmers to make purchases or deliver merchandise without having to carry goods for long distances to out-of-the-way parking places.

"The suggestion is also aimed at the practice of business men and downtown employes in leaving their cars parked for long periods of time in the business section, thus making it necessary for rural customers to find parking spaces several blocks from its business district.

The city council placed the matter in the hands of the body which will act upon it as a committee of the whole. Tentative plans call for the use of one policeman to check cars during the hours in which an ordinance of this kind would be in effect

It is apparent that Circleville plans to model its limitation ordinance along the lines of the one in use in Chillicothe where it has met with complete success and has been a boon not only to farmers but to city motorists as well Even many of those opposed to such an ordinance when it was suggested for adoption here now agree that it has been a wise and commendable action."

HUGE RUBBER MERGE HEARD

Report Goodyear and U. S. Rubber Companies to Combine; Unconfirmed.

AKRON, O., April 18.—Two gigantic rubber company mergers were rumored unofficially in financial circles here today.

One of the reports said that Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company will merge with United States Rubber Company, forming the world's largest rubber corporation which would have factories in all parts of the world and an annual sales volume of $500,000,000.

Besides numerous rubber plantations and cotton fabric mills, the merged company would own the largest Zeppelin factory and hangar in the world.

Paul W Litchfield, president of Goodyear, was out of the city today and no confirmation nor denial of the rumors could be obtained. He was reported to be in the east conferring with U. S. Rubber Company officials.

The recent sweeping wage cut at the Goodyear plant was said to have been one of the preliminary steps in the expected merger of the giant concerns.

The other rumor was to the effect that B. F. Goodrich Company is planning to obtain stock control of the General Tire & Rubber Company, one of the most consistantly prosperous in this district. General recently announced its 61st consecutive stock dividend.

JACKSON TO FIGHT GAS

City Refuses Increased Ohio Fuel Gas Co. Rate; Figures Are Given by Manager.

Jackson city council has again served notice on the Ohio Fuel Gas Co that they will not approve any increase in rates for that city.

E. M. Tharp, Jackson assistant manager, went before council at the meeting last week to renew the appeal for a higher rate previously argued by Ed. L. Lepper, district manager of Chillicothe.

In asking for the increased rate, Tharp pointed out the large sum paid by the gas company in salaries in Jackson-co, as well as the payments for leases and royalties. Tharp also spoke of the increasing price of gas. The present average, according to the speaker, is 68 cents and if the ratio of increase is maintained it will be 86 cents by 1940

Tharp estimated the company's loss in Jackson as $17,728. The gas official is said to have admitted under questioning that the entire amount paid out for leases and royalties in Jackson-co is charged to Jackson consumers, and is figured in the sum of $71,000 given as the expenditure for the city during the year

Complete Separation from Affairs in South America Now Announced

GUNBOATS READY

Several Instances of Ruling are Reviewed

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Complete separation from Nicaraguan affairs, Secretary of State Stimson's new Caribbean policy, has full administration support, and in the face of pressure already exerted on the White House and state department, it will be achieved.

On behalf of Stimson it was emphasized at the state department that American lives and property will be protected under the new policy if the Americans in the danger areas obey instructions to seek haven in ports where warships can afford asylum.

ORDERS RECEIVED

Orders to the commanders of the Memphis, Asheville and Sacramento, the three naval vessels already on the east coast of Nicaragua, and to the cruiser Rochester, now at Balboa, Canal Zone, enroute to the east coast, are:

"The offering of asylum, the use of all force in protection of life and property if the places you are guarding are attacked, but denial to you of extending your operations into the interior and beyond the limits of the towns you are sent to guard."

This instruction was sent to the Rochester along with orders for her refueling at Balboa and "proceed with dispatch to Bluefields."

A study of the state department papers reveals there is ample precedent for Stimson's instructions sent to American Minister Eberhardt at Managua and to American Consul Rowe at Bluefields, warning Americans in the interior either to leave Nicaragua or seek haven at the ports protected by American war ships.

AMERICANS WARNED

These instructions added that Americans in Nicaragua need not expect American armed forces to pierce the interior to protect them, and that the government did not propose to undertake such a program.

In March, 1916, during the Villa incidents, when the Mormon colony was ordered to leave Mexico by Defacto President Carranza, Secretary of State Lansing telegraphed Consul Garrett at Laredo, "If in your judgment conditions warrant such action as a precautionary measure, all Americans in your district should immediately leave for the border or nearest port."

The following June when anti-American feeling was at its height in Mexico, Lansing asked the war department to send a transport to Tampico and Vera Cruz to evacuate Americans. When he sent this message, "Inform all Americans you can reach and endeavor to induce as many as possible to take passage for United States on the transport."

Officials declared today that there is every reason to believe the native Nicaraguan national guard is approaching the efficiency on which American withdrawal next June is predicated.

STATE'S FAVORITE BREEDS REVEALED BY DOG CENSUS

What are Ohio's most popular dog breeds?

As a result of a survey of pure-bred dogs in this state just completed by the Chappel Kennel Foundation, Rockford, Illinois, the answer to this oft-asked question can now be given. The Ohio survey was part of the nation-wide "dog breed census" covering 44,988 dogs kept for companionship or exhibition. Over 70 different breeds were listed.

For convenience in tabulating, the various breeds were broken down into seven recognized groups; namely, non-sporting dogs, terriers, toys, bird-dogs, hounds, working dogs and farm-ranch dogs. The playful Boston Terrier in numbers leads all Ohio dogs as well as its own non-sporting classification, although the Chow Chow, of striking Chinese appearance is becoming quite popular. The Wire Fox-terrier and the Scottie, strong favorites in urban homes, easily lead the terrier group, with Fox terriers numbering four to every Scottie. Among the smaller breeds, the Pekingese, an Oriental toy dog of great antiquity, is the reigning favorite, with the Pomeranian holding a strong second place.

Setters and Pointers retain their long-time supremacy as bird-dogs, but with the merry little Cocker Spaniel popular and well-liked in both urban and rural sections. The Beagle, whose musical bark thrills the hunter, is the favorite of hounds. Most numerous of work-dogs is the German Shepherd, while the Collie continues as the favorite of farm dogs.

Some interesting facts were brought out by the Foundation survey. Purebred dogs are definitely on the increase. This fact is corroborated by increased registrations on the stud books of the American Kennel Club and American Field. The larger and more heavily coated breeds predominate in the rural sections, while the smaller breeds and those having smooth, wiry or silky coats are found largely in the centers of population. Pug dogs and mastiffs, at the height of popularity at the opening of the present century, have now all but disappeared.

The house-dog is the answer to present-day small home and apartment living, and keeping a dog within the home is but a small problem if certain simple but essential principles are observed, according to the Chappel Kennel Foundation. The dog should have his own little nook for rest and for receiving his meals. His sleeping place should be clean and dry and protected against draft. He should be given outdoor exercise every day. Fifteen minutes of hearty romping will do him more good than several miles at a slow walk. A meal of a prepared, well-balanced meat food in the evening and some dog biscuits in the morning is all a dog needs in the way of food. Avoid table scraps, starchy or soupy foods and sweets, and provide fresh, clean water at all times. Rin-tin-tin, famous movie dog, has been on just such a regime for the past eight years, and today, at 13 years of age, is in better physical condition than many dogs several years younger.

Kippy-Kit Co. Again Puts Out Brand New Article

Always putting out something new, something useful and something quite different, the Kippy-Kit Co., one of Circleville's growing industries has just placed its first complete catalogue in the hands of dealers. And like everything else that Kippy-Kit puts out, it's different.

Deviating from the usual type of catalogues, this one combines art and beauty throughout and being of the loose leaf type the new items that will continually be created and made by this concern can easily be added, keeping it complete at all times.

The pleasing and attractive colors, orange and black are artistically combined thruout and the front cover, of handsome gray cover stock, has the silhouette figures of a man and woman in evening dress with the Kippy-Kit in evidence.

The first page shows a very good picture of the Kippy-Kit home with a map of the United States and the places of permanent displays namely, Seattle, Los Angeles, Denver, Kansas City, Chicago, New York and Boston.

The next page pictures, in silhouette, the occasions that Kippy-Kit items can be used for gifts such as Christmas, Bridge Prizes, Graduation Presents, Birthday Gifts, Wedding Presents, Mothers Day Remembrances, and Dance Souvenirs.

On the following pages are illustrations of the different Kippy-Kit items and their uses. The items that are listed in their first catalogue includes Kippy-Kit, Me-Dee Aid, Tra-Valet, Protecto-Dent, Harth-Witch, Par Pack-It, Jax-Ty-Rak, Packy-Doo, Skip, Jiffy Set, Chocky, Flor-De-Lee, Ta, Individual Shoe Shiner, Key Cases, Comb and Nail File and Did-Dee-Dot.

HORNSBY NOW CHICAGO HERO

Rajah Gets Two Home Runs In Week, Each of Which Wins Game For Cubs

BY COPELAND C. BURG.

NEW YORK, April 18.—A great many years ago world affairs centered pretty much around a gentleman named Achilles, who had trouble with one of his heels. And today it seemed history was to repeat itself through Rogers Hornsby, the heel-troubled young man, who pilots the Chicago Cubs.

Achilles, after all, may be proved a considerable piker by Hornsby for Ashilles' heel trouble finally proved his undoing, whereas Hornsby gives promise of surmounting all to become a superman, who may thoroughly defy his critics by not only managing the Bruins but at the same time playing a great game of ball at second base.

For the second time in the opening week of baseball Hornsby was cast in the hero's role this morning. His big bat won for the Cubs yesterday when he knocked his second homer of the season and Chicago overturned the Pirate 5 to 4. Cuyler and English were on base and Bednar was the luring victim.

All the other teams in both leagues were officially idle yesterday, rain putting off the St. Louis-Cincinnati game.

PICKAWAY SCHOOLS

PICKAWAY SCHOOL P. T. A. MEETING

Approximately 100 people attended the P.T.A. meeting Wednesday evening of last week. It was a small crowd, but all had a good time, and it was rather late when they went home. After a short business session the teachers rendered an hour's program and S. T. Rife, of Circleville, gave a very splendid address. The assembly then adjourned to the cafeteria and dining hall where the teachers treated all to ice cream, cake and coffee.

The entertainment part of the program consisted of two parts. The men appeared first and attempted to entertain the audience with character impersonations and monologues; Mr. Bradley impersonated and related the woes of a poor washerwoman; Mr. Meyer was a Hebrew candidate for member of the board of education; Mr. Althaus was Ali Babi, the Hindu magician with all kinds of tricks up his sleeve; Mr. Seitz, as a "Dutch" farmer, related his experiences in setting a hen.

The lady members of the teaching staff then entertained with a series of songs and art poses. Their first number was a vocal duet by Miss Dilsaver and Miss Wood, Miss Radcliffe at the piano. Miss Radcliffe then sang two solos, Mary Ruth Tolbert at the piano. The next number was a series of art poses accompanied by appropriate music. Miss Radcliffe, Miss Wood and Miss Dilsaver furnished the accompaniment for the various old paintings posed as follows: Mother Machree—Miss McKenzie; An Old-fashioned Girl—Miss McNeal; Alice Bluegown—Miss O'Harra; When You and I Were Young, Maggie—Mrs. Denman and Miss Shaner; The Irish Washerwoman—Miss Swearingen; An Old-fashioned Garden—Mrs. Johnson and Miss Wertman. The entire cast then closed the program in their various costumes by singing an original P. T. A. song. Lee Smith prepared the picture frame and scenery for the posings. The posings were excellently done and the music was very, very nice. All are agreed that it was a splendid program.

Following this entertainment, Mr. Rife addressed the audience on "Objectives in Education." Present-day aims and objectives were discussed and compared with the aims and objectives of past days, especially those of the ancient Greeks, of the mound-builders and Indians, of the New England Puritans, and of the old settlers of the Pickaway plains. It was an excellent address and the people appreciated it very much. Those who were absent never will know just how much they missed.

The parents and patrons will be hosts to the teachers at the next meeting, Wednesday, May 6. Officers for next year will be elected, and a good program will be provided. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance.

The other night the moderator of the general assemby of the Presbyterian church addressed a representative gathering in Columbus. He spoke of the fact that last year the denomination raised some seventy-three million dollars for all purposes. At five per cent this would represent an investment of a billion and a half. Only one corporation in America is capitalized for this vast sum of money Yet here are two million people voluntarily contributing this vast sum. Why? Because they believe in religion and in the church as the expression of religion. We do not have a perfect church just as we do not have a perfect automobile. But we are working towards an ideal. Come and help the church achieve this ideal. Our forefathers brought this ideal to this country. It is our duty to hand it on enriched to our children. The church has this as its goal. Go to church tomorrow as a pledge of your faith in the ideal and your willingness to cooperate with good men and women working for a common end.

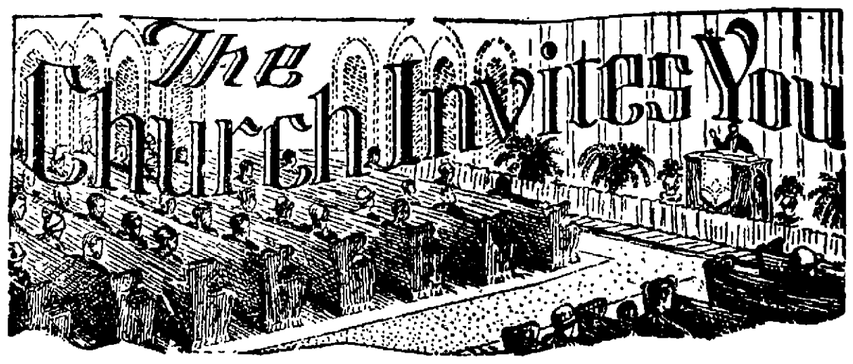
The Church Invites You



A CHURCH ATTENDANCE APPEAL

"The church is the protector of our communities, property being more valuable, human life safer and virtue in less danger where Christian institutions exist. Her house of worship and work is a witness to God every day in the year, a symbol of all that is good, a call to all that is holy."

"The church is the conserver of the values of the past, the creator of the ideals in the present and the torchbearer of tomorrow's progress."

Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

In this lesson are exhibited the psychological and social and spiritual laws that work out the penalties of selfishness and the rewards of righteousness.

V 19. "Now there was a certain rich man, and he was clothed in purple and fine linen, faring sumptuously ever day." Here are recorded facts not sinful in themselves but evident temptations that may lead to selfishness, bigotry, misused power and assumed authority.

V. 20. "And a certain beggar named Lazarus was laid at his gate, full of sores" This man's name was stated because it bore a meaning suggestive of his character; it means "helped of God" indicating piety therefore possessing character; he was a victim of circumstances which made him poor.

V. 21. "And desiring to be fed with the crumbs that fell from the rich man's table: yea even the dogs came and licked his sores" The dogs noticed this stricken beggar whom the rich man did not notice; men may be known by theim effort in helping those in real need; the rich man was too selfish to care for the beggar.

V. 22. "And it came to pass that the beggar died; and that he was carried away by the angels into Abraham's bosom; and the rich man also died and was buried." Death brings all to the same level; there is a reward for the righteous, the pious, those who make character first, the rich man had an expensive funeral and that was the end of the use of his money.

V. 23. "And in Hades he lifted up his eyes being in torments and seeth Abraham afar off and Lazarus in his bosom" Death does not mean annihilation; personality and consciousness are conserved; facts as they really are must be faced some time; there is no such thing as covering up any form of sin; sooner or later it will be known; God does not execute justice like a policeman: he lets truth do its office work.

V 24. "And he cried and said Father Abraham, have mercy on me and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue; for I am in anguish in this flame." The rich man recognizes his just doom; death does not change the heart and a man's sins do not die with his body.

V. 25. "But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things and Lazarus in like manner evil things; but now here he is comforted and thou art in anguish" Torment is a mental state in which memory recalls what was enjoyed and what was done while in the world that was selfish mean and contemptible: bliss is made by a memory of a life in the world that marked righteousness and the highest type character.

Vs 27, 28. "And he said I pray thee therefore father that thou wouldest send him to my father's house; for I have five brethren: that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment. When one comes to himself, then it is that evangelism is most important.

V. 29. "But Abraham saith they have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them." The appointed means of grace at all times is enough for the salvation of men.

V 30. "And he said, nay, father Abraham, but if one go to them from the dead, they will repent." Men want something spectacular, miraculous, sensational: calm thought and reason proceeds with facts as they are.

Discussion Questions on S.S. Lesson

1. What modern social problems are reflected in this lesson?
2. In what ways may the selfishness as exemplified in this lesson be found in us?
3. What is the penalty of selfishness?
4. What is the relationship between life's privileges and life's responsibilities?
5. If the present high cost of sickness, maternity and funerals strikes you as callousness toward the poor, how would you remedy it?
6. What are the main teachings of the lesson?

Clericus says "Souls of men do not die with their bodies: the soul is conscious after death: happiness is righteous, condemnation for the unrighteous: wealth has no power over death: death fixes relationships: God gives sufficient warning to prepare for death."

Lesson Prayer ."Help us to make wealth our servant; forbid that we sould be a slave to money power. cleanse our hearts of all selfishness and lead us to live righteously among men with the piety that becometh a child of God."

BOOK REVIEW

SIN AND THE NEW PSYCHOLOGY, Barbour. The Abingdon Press, confronts the view that there is no sin and deduces the conclusion that all things done to the moral and religious life by non-Christian means can be better done by Jesus.

Revenge is the weak pleasure of a little and narrow mind.

HOW MAY THE QUALITY OF WORSHIP BE MEASURED AS WORSHIP PERTAINS TO THE SUNDAY SCHOOL PROGRAM?

The materials used in worship should be measured by the following standard:

1. The materials should be considered a means of securing a worship experience and not an end in themselves. These materials will include songs, Scripture responses, memory selections, stories, prayer, pictures and dramatization.

2. The materials should be graded to the interests of the worshipper. This is very difficult in a Bible school in which all age groups come together for the worship program.

3. The materials should be of the best quality It is difficult for children to worship when the song book given them is soiled, torn and of inferior material

4 The materials should be familiar and intelligible to the worshippers.

5. The materials should be unified and related to a central theme.

6 The materials should be varied to provide for a wide range of interests .

7. The materials should be in harmony with the service and purpose to be attained.

College Not for All

TWO prominent educators write this months about the school and the boy, the one classifying boys who should not go to college and the other counseling patents on the kind of school to which they should not send particular kinds of boys.

Dean Loomis, of New York University, warns parents against permitting their sons to choose a college on a basis of social contacts or athletics. Too many parents forget that colleges and universities are not like so many peas in a pod. The school must be fitted to student, not the student to the school.

Frederick Winsor, veteran educator of boys, concerns himself with the boy who should not seek his "higher education" at a college or university. He calls this type the "unintellectual" and expresses great admiration for him. For this type he would like to see better facilities for his preparation for life and less effort exerted for preparing him for college.

His studies and deductions bear out the proposition that the ability to get through college does not mean the boy is in his right element, any more than that all who "flunk" are wasting their time. In the final analysis, sending a boy or girl to college is pretty much of a gamble. Neither the raw material nor the semi-raw material can be accurately assayed until the process is completed.

Sabbath Madness

THE Sabbath, once the day of rest, is now fast becoming known as the day of eternal rest. For more people now go to an untimely death on that day than any other day of the week. Mad motoring is responsible for this ghastly change.

The Sabbath was made for man, to be sure, but not for the exercise to his uttermost folly. Yet as surely as Monday rolls around we have the gruesome front page news of the dead, the dying and injured who have apparently gone mad over Sunday and have paid the price.

This is not the full extent of the bad uses to which we are putting the Sabbath day, although they are the most spectacular. Add to this list the jangled nerves of many a good wife, the tired body of many a husband, the unnatural stimulation of many children of the families that rise early and start out on a quest of distance.

Fast and furious driving is likely to mark such a trip, with many near accidents. The mind, body and soul undergoes almost every experience and emotion except those of rest and repose and recreation. Then the homeward journey and the sleep of exhaustion or, what is more likely, the sleeplessness of exhausted nerves.

The pendulum swings from extreme. The deathlike silence and stupor of the Sabbath of the past is gone and probably gone forever. But the deathly clamor of our Twentieth Century Sabbath is equally impossible. Wise motorists avoid Sunday travel as much as possible, or seek byways and unfrequented places. If, what is best of all, use the care to take them a relatively short distance to a spot where they may make the most of the day in the rest and recreation of body and spirit which alone justify the Sabbath.

Billboards Are Less Unsightly

THERE is much promise in the mere fact that the Outdoor Advertising Association is turning its collective thought to the outdoor signboard with the view of saving both it and the landscape. To save the billboard from banishment from scenic highways those who own and use them must find a way to make them less obnoxious to society and less injurious to scenery. It is high time that constructive steps were taken to eliminate a condition that still remains an evil.

The situation is not as bad as it was formerly. When outdoor advertising came into universal use there was no disposition on the part of those buying and selling this form of advertising to pay the slightest bit of attention toward preserving the beauty of the landscape. Signs were erected where they commanded the most attention, and unfortunately that frequently was where they did the most harm to the scenery. Finally the public began to protest against these landscape scars, but the advertisers paid scant heed to them until they discovered the effect of their advertising was being killed.

Legislation, public opinion, public-spirited landowners who refuse to allow poster boards on their property, and a willingness of advertisers to go half way have combined in recent years to correct a condition which was becoming intolerable. Signboards are being reconciled to the landscape by reduction in size, use of natural colors and artistic designs and discretion in placing.

BIDDING FOR THE TOURIST TRADE

"MURDER AT EAGLE'S NEST"
By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

"Bim" Martin, young newspaper reporter and her fiance, Walter Vance, assistant police chief, are baffled by the murder of Baroness von Wiese at Eagle's Nest and the theft of her jewels. The outstanding suspects are the butler, who denies receiving a note from the Baroness, her maid with whom she quarreled, and Mary Frost, whose shawl was wrapped around the body. Mary left the party with her husband, Ted, returning alone, later, for the shawl. According to the maid, Laura Allan had borrowed it. Laura claims she saw Mary enter the garden wearing the shawl. Bim feels that Mary is shielding Ted who flirted with the Baroness. A stone from a man's ring is found in the garden. Carl Carey, New York reporter, arrives at Kingcliffe. "Bim" is attracted to him. His implications regarding Laura Allan prompt "Bim" to investigate. She learns that Laura entertained Bunny Baird late at night. The imprints of the woman's shoes in the garden fit those of Emily Hardy, the hostess.

CHAPTER XXII.

BIM saw that it was not going to be easy to keep the young Assistant Chief of Police good natured if she meant to enjoy the gorgeous Mr. Carey's society. But this did not depress her; she hummed a little tune as she set out for Pine Hill.

It was still very early for Bim had ventured into the village before the remainder of Kingcliffe was well awake. And now, as she moved in a leisurely way up Lowland Drive, the sun which seemed to lie upon the hills across the river, set every leaf and grass blade with gems and sent long,

Bim glanced toward the right where Eagle's Nest lay silent and, as it seemed to her, a trifle grim behind its lordly stretch of grounds. Above the tree-tops, toward the southwest, she could see the chimneys of the Frost home; a bit nearer a thin curl of blue smoke indicated that in spite of the warm weather, Bunny Baird had a blaze in the great fireplace which was his pride and his joy.

Bim thought of those who lived here, high on the hill—of Em and Peter Hardy, Baird, Mary and Ted Frost and finally, of Millicent and Bob Trent—and tried to fit them, like broken parts of a puzzle, into the murder of the Baroness Von Wiese. But the task was beyond her, the puzzle would not come out. Not one of these people she called friends seemed well placed in that sinister pattern.

Musingly she came out upon a little promontory, where the drive veered sharply to the westward and stood there a moment, leaning her elbows on the rustic railing to look over the river.

A Puzzling Discovery

Someone was swimming some distance off the beach. Bim could see a head bob above the still water as arms were flung out in long, powerful strokes. She wondered idly who the swimmer was—none of the Pine Hill crowd, certainly, for not one of them could swim like this.

The swimmer was coming in and she waited, eager to satisfy her curiosity. Presently a tall, lithe figure stood on the bench shaking himself free of water which showered in all directions and glinted in the sun like millions of jewels. Standing there so poised and proud, he looked like a young god wrapped in glory.

He raised his arms and began a series of setting-up exercises. Then Bim remembered what she had heard said a very long time ago—only it wasn't a very long time ago; it was only yesterday in the butler's pantry at Eagle's Nest when she stopped there to speak to William. "Nothing like a half hour in the water to keep one fit," he had said. . . .

Thus, then, was William. Keeping fit. And succeeding very well indeed, Bim reflected, as she watched him go serenely through more and more difficult athletic feats down there on the hard-packed sand.

All at once she caught her breath and leaned forward, thrilling with interest. For now William was dancing—how he was dancing! Bim had seen practically all of the famous sons of Terpsichore—Russians, French, native borns—but she doubted if one of them could have given such a performance—one so eminently skillful, so full of grace, as that which William the butler presented with no music but the singing of the birds, no spotlight but the rays of the early morning sun and no audience save herself whom he could not see.

She stared until he made a low, humorous bow toward the river and disappeared in the bath house at the far end of the beach, after which she went on her way more thoughtful than she had been before.

Still Water

"The butler," Bim told herself, "is a dancer and a good one. An artist. Then why is he a butler? There is more to William," she decided, "than meets the eye. I wonder," her thoughts ran on, "just how much Walter knows about William the butler? He seems a very — well, astonishing person when you think about it.

"First of all William the butler so impresses a Baroness that she allows herself positive rudeness in staring at him. Then he drops a glass which I never heard of a butler doing except maybe in novels. Then he keeps rendezvous with the Baroness—unwillingly, it's true—while her hand rests on his arm and a wilted look comes over him.

"Then he covers up the maid Jane's hysteria—why was Jane hysterical, I wonder?—with a faked story of attempted robbery. After which he carries a note for the Baroness and denies it. And now he dances on the beach like a faun. We shall have," Bim concluded, "to do some snooping through the private life of William the butler, as Mr. Carl Carey would put it. Very quietly, of course. For I have a feeling that William the butler would be quite capable of circumventing any and all snooping if he wished."

Bim's feet had kept pace with her thoughts and now she found herself on the Frost driveway. Like Eagle's Nest, the house was closed and looked deserted but her ring was answered at once by Sarah, the colored maid, who said that Mrs Frost had a headache.

"Oh, but she'll see me, Sarah. I'll just run up to her room a moment. She won't mind, I'm sure."

Sarah was doubtful, but before she could object Bim was up the stairs and tapping at Mary's door. And Mary was ill, as Bim saw at a glance.

"You poor darling," she began, "why do you let it upset you so?"

"I can't help it, Bim. I was going to send for you; I've got to talk with someone and—and I can trust you, can't I? I feel so alone—so dreadfully alone—"

Tears ran down the haggard face and Bim went to sit on the edge of the bed, gathering up Mary's hands, patting them gently.

"Of course, you can, dear. Maybe it will help to talk things out. Please believe me when I say I want to make things easier."

"No one can do that, Bim. All these years—I've kept everything to myself. You know that. And now . . . I've made a dreadful mistake. You see, I've tried so hard not to let people know about—about——"

"You mean about Ted, Mary. Hadn't we better be frank?"

"Yes, of course. Only it makes it seem so—so real. Well, the time for hiding things is past, I suppose. We quarreled last night. Oh, not bitterly—just a word or two. Only I've never said anything to him before—not in anger. He's been—at least, he'd seemed different for a long time. No open humiliation for me . . . And then it began again when he saw that terrible woman."

"But you couldn't blame him altogether, Mary. She was very lovely and she seemed determined to lead him on."

"Yes. I guess I wasn't feeling well. Anyway nothing ever has bothered me so. I said to him that I wouldn't stand any more. What made me do that, Bim? Of course I didn't mean it; I love him too much to let anything cause an open break." Mary sighed and mopped her eyes and Bim sat there, patting her hand. "It seemed to infuriate him. He drank and drank. And when he started away he rushed out and got into the car.

"I thought, of course, he'd be waiting but he wasn't. He'd gone and left me."

"What did you do, Mary? You should have told us this."

"I know that now. But I couldn't bear them to see the picture of a neglected wife I made. I just couldn't bear it, Bim—that night I mean—especially that woman. I waited out on the terrace; you remember there's shrubbery there and a little stone bench and I sat down and waited till everyone was gone. At least I thought they'd gone. Then I got up to go too. Then I remembered about my shawl. You see I'd no idea—I just thought it had been mislaid and when there seemed no one about I thought I'd see if it had turned up. But Imogene was in the dressing room — I hadn't counted on that—and of course she'll give it away."

"There was nothing for you to be ashamed of, Mary. Everyone loves you."

"Really, Bim? Oh, really?" A sad little smile crossed the tired eyes and Bim knew Mary was thinking, "Everyone, maybe, but the one who matters." "Imogene wanted to call Em but I told her not to and got out as soon as I could. I meant to walk home but it's awfully dark. And I remembered the phone in the gate house and called a taxi from there. It seemed strange for me to be standing out there alone. But that's what happened, Bim. Only for one thing—"

"Yes, Mary.

Two Alike

"When I was leaving—after I'd got outside the door—I looked back and I saw someone on the back terrace. Someone with my shawl on."

"Well, why didn't you go and get it? That would have been the proper thing to do."

"But you see I didn't want them to know I was there. Besides I thought I recognized the woman. I thought," said Mary in a still way, "She was Laura Allan!"

"But, my dear—"

"Yes, I know now. After all, the Baroness and Laura Allan look a little alike from a distance. They're both tall and dark. So am I, for that matter," Mary finished with a shaky bit of laugh.

Bim sat there a long time considering. Mary was terrifically upset, harried by some nameless fear. Bim had a feeling that she might say more—that she could if she wished.

"Better tell me the rest," she urged quietly. "You'll feel happier if you do."

To her surprise Mary began to sob hysterically. "But—but there's no more, Bim! Truly, truly there's no more! I'm just wretched — awfully down. Who wouldn't be? With Ted as he is—"

"Isn't Ted all right, dear? You're not afraid of him?"

"Oh, I am—I am!" Mary cried. "I'm always afraid when he's drinking! How do I know—how does anyone know—what Ted may do when he's drinking?"

AT THE CLIFTONA

Buster Keaton of the frozen countenance cavorts through a comedy of errors in which too many sweethearts, a jealous husband with a gun, a policeman and a balky auto figure in a riproaring series of trials and tribulations. It all happens in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," his new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy which will open Sunday at the Cliftona Theatre.

Adapted from the stage play, one of the reigning comedy hits of Broadway, the new picture has Buster in the role of a young man who is "touted" as a gay Lothario to such an extent that he is in trouble—mostly woman trouble—practically all the time. He gets suspected by his sweetheart, is caught in a compromising position with a married woman by her jealous huspand—who has a gun—disrupts a fashionable hotel, wrecks a car and almost himself, and otherwise stays in hot water to the infinite relish of the audience.

AT THE GRAND

Winnie Lightner, queen of song pluggers, sings several brand new numbers in her own inimitable style in "The Life of the Party," her newest starring vehicle for Warner Brothers which comes to the Grand Theatre Sunday.

In the story, this famous comedy songstress is first heard in a New York music shop where she is employed as a song plugger, and later does her stuff at an exclusive Havana hotel where she has journeyed in search of a millionaire.

The all star supporting cast includes Irene Delroy, Jack Whiting, Charles Judels and Charles Butterworth. Rol Del Ruth directed.

AT THE MET

James Cruze, whose latest production "Costello Case" is now at the Met Theatre, has held more and different types of jobs than any other director in the movies. At various times in his colorful career this soldier of fortune has worked as a mess boy in Manila; later he turned up in Alaska, where he remained for some time. When he needed a job, he took the first one that came along, and in this way obtained a knowledge of the ordinary man and woman that has served him well in his picture activities. Cruze has been at times laborer, farmhand, waiter and cook.

TEACHERS SESSION MARKS BROKEN

The attendance records of the Ohio State Educational Conference were broken this year when over 6,000 persons attended. The Visual Instruction section of the conference again held the highest attendance record of all the sections, having over 800 persons present and turning away about half of that number. Visual instruction, according to B. A. Aughinbaugh, State Department of Education, is apparently growing in popularity with school teachers from year to year. Outstanding features of the Visual Instruction section were a series of talking educational motion pictures an address by Dr. Thomas Finnegan, and an illustrated lecture by B. A. Aughinbaugh, State Supervisor of Visual Instruction.

Careful Diet Important Aid in Fighting Colds

Authorities Study Causes and Cures of This Common Trouble Which Probably Accounts for More Suffering and Economic Loss Than Any Other Ailment.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

IT is only recently that I wrote on the subject of colds. But I cannot refrain from again warning you against this common ailment.

DR. COPELAND

The common cold is one of the greatest enemies of the public health. It is all too frequent in its occurrence and in many instances can be prevented.

The medical adviser at Cornell University has inaugurated a campaign against colds. This is the first time that any university has organized a plan for combatting colds. If all similar institutions and the public in general took notice of the necessity of guarding against colds, there would be a great decrease in this ailment.

A cold causes more unnecessary suffering, inconvenience, and economic loss than most persons realize. The statistics gathered on this disease are staggering. In spite of its menace, little progress has been made in cutting down the prevalence of the disease.

The treatment of the "cold preventive classes" held at Cornell includes weekly exposure to the ultra violet light, and instruction regarding diet and ventilation. In special cases, careful study of the nose and throat is made. The use of vaccines will be utilized wherever possible.

Diet is important in the prevention of colds. You should eat nourishing food. Milk, fresh fruit and leafy vegetables should be included in your daily diet.

Drink plenty of water. At least six to eight glasses of water should be consumed every day. Excess of coffee and tea are not advised. Contrary to the common impression, according to the Cornell experiment, whiskey is more likely to bring on a cold than to prevent one.

Sleep eight hours every day. This helps to ward off attacks. If you feel a cold coming on, it is best to remain in bed. Frequently a day away from work will prevent the necessity of a longer absence from work.

Your home and place of business should be well ventilated. The air should be moist. The temperature indoors should be between sixty-eight and seventy-two degrees.

If the weather is cold, dress accordingly. Avoid chilling the body and keep away from persons who have colds. If you have a cold, guard others from getting it from you.

Above all, if you have a cold do not neglect it. Go to your doctor, so that he may prescribe for you and instruct you. Do not rely on "home treatment" and patent medicines.

Answers to Health Queries

T. A. N. Q.—What can be done for a red bloodshot vein in the center of the eye?

A.—This may be due to strain or cold. Have the eye properly examined so that definite advice and treatment can be outlined.

J. W. B. Q.—Is there any chance of complete recovery from gastric ulcer in a man of 46? The patient has been on a diet and has gained eight pounds, but there is still slight soreness in the pit of the stomach and heartburn at times. What would you advise?

A.—Follow your doctor's advice and instructions most faithfully. Proper diet and general care should bring about general improvement. For further instructions send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

A SENIOR

TO DEVOTE PAGE TO CONTRIBUTORS

As a means of helping to publish the high school annual this year, it has been planned to have a page devoted to contributors. Instead of soliciting advertising matter as heretofore, this is thought to be a better plan. So far it seems to meet with a willing response from those interested in the schools.

About one hundred and fifty dollars has been promised ranging in contributions from five to twenty-five dollars. No thorough canvass has been made, nor will there be a thorough canvass made since the time is growing late to publish an annual.

Any one wishing to make a contribution may do so through any of the high school teachers. Each subscribing five dollars or more will receive a copy of the annual.

DO YOU WANT A VERDANT LAWN?

During this warm weather when there is no snow on the ground, the students of Circleville high school have a tendency to run on the lawn in front of the school.

This running on the lawn tramples down the grass and hinders its growing. The effects may not be seen now, but later when every thing is bright and green ,the schoolhouse lawn will be brown, or there will be places on it where no grass is growing.

So now is the time to start beautifying the lawn. Students can help do this by 'keeping off the grass.'

'THE NEW POOR' SHOWS PROMISE

Practices of the senior class play, 'The New Poor' have been held daily, alternating the casts. All members are working very enthusiastically and the show promises to be a good one.

To hear and see a Russian duke make love to a girl who orders him to kiss her saying, "Kiss me! I order you to kiss me," and to hear his meek answer, "Very good, Mees Alice," will make you rock with laughter.

The very fact that the entire Welby home is surrounded with members of the nobility makes the household very popular. Mrs Welby boasts that although no man has ever entered her room since the death of her dear George, she was never once made uncomfortable, when the duke insisted on bringing her meals to her room, because of 'the gracious charm of his bedside manner.'

The princess captures the heart of Amos Welby and even goes so far as to cause him to knock over a table littered with cups and saucers.

Detective O Farrell with the assistance of Mary Maudsley, discovers that the nobility is not quite as 'high' as their names make them

Although the duke prefers painting as his hobby, more light is thrown on the subject when some very fine portraits disappear from the Welby home, valued at forty of fifty thousand dollars After observing closely, the faces of the titled nobles had been seen in a rogue gallery along with some more clever crooks. Then the action begins. You'll miss the time of your life if you don't see 'The New Poor,' May 14 and 15. The admission price has been set, adults 35c—students 25c. Tickets will be reserved gratis at Hall and Gleckler's Drug store.
